SOCIAL JUSTICE

CULTURAL BONDING

There could be no greater contribution to Social Justice than to strive for a nation of people whose ideals – not cultures, not religions – are in one accord as it moves to protect and bond itself throughout every possible circumstance in daily life.

And so, The Australian Justice Tribunal (The AJT) has developed a social structure based, in part, on a methodology that has proven successful since time began; a methodology that is directed specifically at a nation's youth, but without the controlling megalomania that has violated its purity over the millennia.

We have named this methodology, "Cultural Bonding", which culminates at the end of Year 12 as every student, indeed every 17-year-old in Australia spends 12 months together under the banner of an Onshore Defence Force uniform and the Australian flag.

Unfortunately, it is not the legal domain of our Charity to promote or lobby for the introduction of our Cultural Bonding program. Our role is to solely develop the concept and to then leave its introduction into Australian life to those individuals, groups or political parties who may wish to implement it.

So, here is the program in brief:

Definitions

The AJT defines 'Onshore Defence Force' (ODF) and 'Defence' in this manner:

"Onshore Defence Force" means an Australian Onshore Defence Force which comprises young Australian men and women who are educated – for one further compulsory year – in the theory and practices of Australia's emergency and Defence Force capabilities; and within that Gap Year are comprehensively exposed to the substance of diverse career paths and cultural bonding that may otherwise never present.

"Defence" means – in the context of Onshore Defence Force – the act of being trained in the theory and practices of Australia's emergency and Defence Force capabilities; but does not mean the physical act of carrying out these practices whilst undergoing ODF Training.

And it is the Cultural Bonding aspect of Onshore Defence Force (ODF) Training that we believe will, in time, be vital to creating harmony between all cultures and religious beliefs.

Primary Purpose

We need every Australian to treat Onshore Defence Force (ODF) Training as an integral step in the education of all Australian men and women. Most 17-year-olds are in their twelfth (12th) year of education; ten (10) of which have been compulsory by State and Territory law.

The AJT would suggest that a compulsory Gap Year be added to the education of year 12 graduates and early school leavers.

It will be a developmental year of enormous significance in which our youth are educated in the theory and practices of Australia's emergency and Defence Force capabilities. And within that year all ODF Students will be comprehensively exposed through our Career Awareness Programs to the possibilities and substance of a diverse range of career opportunities that present themselves throughout our nation.

Many ODF Students – at the end of training – may select to learn a trade, become a doctor, nurse, engineer or high-tech specialist within the Australian Defence Force (national budget allowing), be it Navy, Army or Air Force. But most will fall into civilian life to achieve the same educational and career goals. That is their choice; a choice based on their new-found – theoretical and practical – awareness of all the opportunities that this nation has to offer.

All ODF Students will have turned 18 by the end of ODF Training.

Border Defence

Onshore Defence Force (ODF) Students will be trained in the defence techniques needed to protect our coastline; and trained to enhance the capabilities of Customs, Voluntary Coastguard and Rescue Services.

Natural Disasters

ODF Students will be trained to reinforce the capabilities of all State, Territory, and Federal Emergency Services in times of cyclones, floods and bushfires. And all Students will emerge from training qualified in CPR and other key paramedic disciplines.

Reasons for Bonding our Cultures

The AJT defines multiculturalism in this manner:

“Multiculturalism” means the voluntary co-existence of diverse cultures; each ethnic group bonded by a common freedom to practice independent cultural traditions and religious beliefs in harmony with each other, and unified by a desire to command the language, respect the heritage, and observe the laws of their socially-inclusive host nation to which allegiance has been pledged.

But the breakdown in this fundamental concept of multiculturalism occurs primarily when the religious beliefs of one ethnic group begin to unacceptably encroach on the rights and beliefs of others, and when the advocating of their laws are laws which are not compatible with, nor can they be integrated into, the laws of a host nation. And it is this breakdown which now disrupts harmony, incites civil unrest, and undermines our National Security.

For the first time in Australia's history we now live our lives under threat of terrorist attacks. We are now warned about the possibility of these attacks by placing us on low, medium, or high alert in the same manner as cyclone, flood and fire warnings. We are no longer at peace.

The freedoms that Australians have fought and died for are now at risk of being lost. We now live in a state of fear.

In response, we need to put an immediate end to threats against our National Security. But we need to learn from the mistakes of Britain and Europe. And we need to act now by using Militant Religious Extremism ("MRE") as a benchmark against which internal national defence measures should be greatly extended and enforced.

40,000 Religious Extremists in Australia

It has been estimated that over 40,000 Australians from within one particular religious faith are currently prepared to practice Militant Religious Extremism (MRE) in the interest of furthering their religious beliefs. However, there is an international indicator which puts this figure at three times greater.

But 40,000 male (only) radicals is enough to damage any nation let alone 120,000. And Australia's combined Defence Force personnel (Navy, Army, Air Force) plus active Reservists only amount to 80,000. It is therefore imperative that the Cultural Bonding aspect of ODF Training be implemented without delay as a fundamental step to quelling civil unrest.

Moderates

The term, "moderates", refers to those believers of a religious faith who – in their daily lives – choose not to exercise the militant religious extremism advocated by the core Holy Text of that religion; militancy that has been repeatedly woven into scripture for the purpose of enforcing the propagation of that faith worldwide.

An estimated 290,000 adult moderates live in Australia [i.e. 90% approx. of (550,000 – 220,000)].

Yet, although moderates live outwardly by the principles of love, forgiveness, and peace, it is their underlying doctrine of hatred and extreme militancy which will surface if they are called upon to force the conversion of others to their faith. And under these circumstances, it has been estimated that over 60% of moderates in Australia (approx. 170,000) will either rise up violently (according to scripture) against other religions and cultures, or inwardly (depending on age and gender) give thanks for those who are rising up.

In reality, moderates are the peaceful Trojan Horse; the vehicle by which they can skilfully – by stealth – prepare for domination; and domination by force, if necessary.

In the main, the majority of Australian moderates are simply dormant religious extremists whom we must – in the interests of caution – add to the already known 40,000.

Regrettably, along with the ongoing upgrading and enforcement of anti-terrorism laws, and the constant surveillance and detection of terrorist cells, we also need to put The Cornerstone of Cultural Bonding (i.e. ODF Training) in place as a matter of urgency.

The Cornerstone of Cultural Bonding

CULTURAL BONDING from the ground up

After 12 years of Interfaith Relations (i.e. an understanding of Religions and Cultures) as a compulsory part of every Australian School curriculum, The AJT believes it should then be made compulsory to spend a Gap Year wearing an Onshore Defence Force (ODF) uniform.

Nothing to do with conscription and nothing to do with bearing arms. But everything to do with learning about vocations (Career Awareness), some never before thought about by ODF Students... then selecting the right vocation... interacting with all Cultures and their Religious beliefs... Self-discipline... and above all a vital opportunity – during an exciting action-packed year – to experience bonding that will endure throughout the lives of all ODF Students. And that's 350,000 + each year; year after endless year, plus the lives they touch.

And while a new generation of proud, bonded and tolerant Australians are slowly taking over the reins the rest of us can get on with the discipline now needed to control the political correctness that has systematically eroded the Australian culture over the past four decades.

ODF PRESENTATION

The bonds created between men and women of all cultures and religions within Australia's multiracial society are bonds that are most easily created when we are young. And there could be no greater process for overcoming and accepting our cultural and religious differences than to share a common purpose.

The AJT believes strongly that our existing multiracial nation with differing cultures, and religious beliefs within each ethnic group, can and will be forged into a multicultural society possessing tolerance and a willingness to integrate without having to lose independent identities. For example, Christian, Jewish, Buddhist, Muslim and Hindu Students (to name a few) will stand side by side throughout their lives because these former ODF Students will have been bonded (in their youth) by one cause; and that is the defence, prosperity and safekeeping of their nation.

It will be a unique and highly positive Cultural Bonding – esprit de corps – experience that will never leave them.

The Tolerance Component of ODF Training

It should be understood that the uniform worn by Onshore Defence Force (ODF) Students – albeit the headwear is military in style – will be a neutral uniform. Naturally, to promote tolerance, concessions such as head scarves and facial hair will be accommodated for cultural and religious reasons. But principally, the uniform will only favour the rights and defence of all people who are advantaged under the Australian flag.

Creating tolerance, of all cultures and religions, within the attitudes of Australia's youth will be a fundamental purpose of ODF Training. And this can be achieved, in part, by educating all ODF Students during one additional key segment of ODF Training known as Interfaith Relations.

It will be during this segment of the ODF Training curriculum that the basic tenets of Christianity, Judaism, Buddhism, Islam, Hinduism, and more, will be taught. And it will be mandatory for all ODF Students, irrespective of religious beliefs, to attend these lectures. Healthy, controlled debate will be encouraged under supervision.

ODF Students who do not attend Interfaith Relations lectures will incur fines against their parents or guardians who will also be given a timeframe in which to ensure that their ODF Students who have formerly absented themselves remedy their breaches. The method of remedy – attending special classes for example – will be set out in the ‘notice to remedy’.

And failure to remedy absenteeism will result in ODF Students forfeiting their receipt of ID Cards at the end of ODF Training. These particular ID Cards will be for the purpose of certifying that the subject ODF Student has completed ODF Training, for without the production of such an ID Card employment may prove difficult.

In essence this ID Card is proof of having studied Interfaith Relations, and by inference the cardholder now possesses a tolerant and inclusive attitude towards other cultures and religions. Without it, an employer may infer that the job applicant is a potential threat to an already harmonious workplace.

It could take 20 years or more of ODF Training to bring about the tolerance so vitally needed to ensure internal National Security; but the alternative has the potential to irreparably damage Australia.

Interfaith Relations Studies Prior to ODF Training

The AJT would recommend the introduction of Interfaith Relations studies into the primary (commencing at year 1) and secondary school curriculums with the consent of the States and Territories of Australia.
