SOCIAL JUSTICE

DEPORTING INTRINSIC AUSTRALIANS

This is the tragic story of a 43-year-old man who had lived in Australia for 33 years. He was educated here and gained tertiary qualifications as an Analytical Chemist from Charles Darwin University in the Northern Territory of Australia.

He was an educated Aussie who not only spoke English flawlessly but also his parent's native German.

He was a working contributor to the viability of our nation and believed throughout his life that he was an Australian permanent resident. But that belief was shattered abruptly in mid-2007.

Unfortunately, it would be mid-2015 before contacting The Australian Justice Tribunal in a desperate plea for help. At this stage he had been arrested and forcibly removed from his partner in Darwin and taken to the Yongah Hill Immigration Detention Centre in Western Australia.

The following explains our course of action which was too late to prevent the deportation of this valued Australian; a deportation that occurred while hundreds of undesirable immigrants were flooding our nation – and each of them on generous welfare benefits.

Unacceptable Response

This link will expose the unacceptable response from the Director of Ministerial Intervention and The AJT's reply to it.

Major Daily Newspapers

The AJT carried out its threat on 5 August 2015 and released its 'plea by email' to the following News Desks of major daily newspapers Australia-wide.

Examiner
Sunday Telegraph
Geelong Advertiser
Daily Telegraph
Canberra Times
The Courier-Mail
Adelaide Advertiser
Herald Sun
Sydney Morning Herald
The Age
The Australian
West Australian

To our knowledge, not one word was published and not one journalist from any news desk responded by email, verbally or in print.

An Ongoing Fight

Once again, The AJT can only do so much in bringing social issues to the attention of the Australian public. And creating change within society is definitely a political domain.

But there is nothing to stop us from defending any Australian (resident or otherwise) who is being denied natural justice. In fact, that is the very purpose of our being. And there could be no greater denial of natural justice than to see human rights violated as blatantly as they were in Thorsten's case.

The fight to protect others will go on until the sum of each fight becomes weighty enough in the High Court of Australia to topple the insensitivity of any government. And Thorsten's matter is at the foundation of many others.
